

Get in touch with a young worker

VOLUNTEER as an instructor in the New Worker Awareness Program

In 2008, over 60,000 young workers ages 15-24 were injured on the job in Canada. 60 were killed.

You can help by volunteering for the USW New Worker Awareness program.

The New Worker Awareness program was designed to help prevent injury and death by increasing awareness among young workers and the community.

Steelworker volunteers are trained to conduct short in-school health and safety seminars for high school students.

How can your local union help?

Are there students near you who are not benefiting from the Steelworker New Worker Awareness program? It's a great way for interested members to become active in the community. The union will provide all the student and instructional support material you need to get started.

Call or email and we'll help get you started. Contact the USW Health, Safety and Environment Department at 416-544-5994 or email nwa@usw.ca for more information.

www.usw.ca

"I highly recommend that secondary schools involve themselves in this excellent initiative."

Doug Craig
Vice-Principal, Sudbury Secondary School

"The instructor immediately developed a positive rapport with the students. The instructor's sincere concern about safety really captured the students."

L. McClinchey
Tech. Dept. Head/
Co-Op Coordinator
Medway High School

"The United Steelworkers show a great deal of concern for student safety."

M. Marcy
Co-Op Education
Dept. Head
East Elgin School

www.usw.ca